RESUME STORY BANK + JENNIFER MILLER PREP

Evidence · Resume Development · Personal Brand · Professional Communication

ESSENTIAL QUESTION

How do I prove what I can do instead of simply saying what I am?

THIS WEEK

You have already built evidence.

You have:

- explored careers
- made financial decisions
- asked professionals real questions
- observed workplace systems
- identified technical and human skills
- practiced professionalism
- reflected on what you learned

Now the challenge is turning those experiences into language employers can understand.

A strong resume does not simply say:

- hardworking
- leader
- responsible
- team player
- good communicator

It proves those qualities through evidence.

PART 1 · START WITH THE EXPERIENCES

List experiences from school, athletics, work, family responsibilities, volunteering, clubs, projects and Future Ready™.

EXPERIENCE 1

Experience:

_____

What happened?

_____

_____

What did I actually do?

_____

_____

What skill did I use?

_____

What was the result?

_____

_____

EXPERIENCE 2

Experience:

_____

Skill it demonstrates:

_____

Evidence:

_____

WEEK 8 · TERRACON

Something I observed, investigated or connected:

_____

Skill it demonstrates:

_____

Evidence:

_____

PART 3 · STOP USING EMPTY ADJECTIVES

Choose one word you might normally put on a resume.

[ ] Hardworking

[ ] Responsible

[ ] Leader

[ ] Team player

[ ] Organized

[ ] Good communicator

[ ] Problem solver

[ ] Reliable

[ ] Adaptable

[ ] Other: _____

Instead of saying:

I am _____

Prove it.

What did you do?

_____

Where?

_____

What happened?

_____

What changed because of your action?

_____

PART 4 · ACTION + CONTEXT + RESULT

Use this structure:

ACTION + CONTEXT + RESULT

EXAMPLE

Weak:

“Good team player.”

Stronger:

“Collaborated with teammates during a high-pressure season while balancing academics and travel commitments.”

Stronger with result:

“Collaborated with teammates during a high-pressure season, adjusted roles when needed and helped maintain preparation through changing schedules.”

BUILD YOUR OWN

PART 5 · ATHLETICS INTO EMPLOYER LANGUAGE

Athletics can create strong evidence.

But employers need language that explains the transferable skill.

Athletic experience:

_____

What actually happened?

_____

_____

What did I have to manage?

_____

What skill did it require?

_____

Translate it into employer language:

_____

_____

PART 6 · EXPERIENCE WITHOUT A FORMAL JOB

You do not need a traditional job title to have credible experience.

Consider:

- caring for siblings or family
- transportation responsibilities
- school projects
- athletics
- clubs
- community service
- church or youth groups
- events
- fundraising
- leadership roles
- personal projects
- helping a family business
- managing schedules
- tutoring
- organizing people or materials

One experience I usually overlook:

_____

Responsibility involved:

_____

Skill it demonstrates:

_____

Resume-ready evidence:

_____

_____

PART 7 · THE FIVE-SECOND TEST

Imagine an employer looks at the top of your resume for five seconds.

What do you want them to remember?

_____

_____

What does your current resume actually communicate?

_____

_____

What is missing?

_____

_____

What feels generic?

_____

_____

What needs stronger evidence?

_____

_____

PART 8 · MY PROFESSIONAL STORY

Complete this without exaggerating.

I am someone who...

_____

_____

I have experience with...

_____

_____

I am strongest when...

_____

_____

People can count on me to...

_____

_____

I am currently building...

_____

_____

PART 9 · JENNIFER MILLER PREP

You will have the opportunity to learn from Jennifer Miller.

Use this experience to understand how professionals evaluate resumes, stories and young candidates.

Something I want Jennifer to explain about resumes:

_____

_____

Something I want to know about how employers read resumes:

_____

_____

Something I want to know about standing out without exaggerating:

_____

_____

Something I want to know about experience when someone is young:

_____

_____

MY QUESTIONS FOR JENNIFER

_____

Why does this matter to me?

_____

_____

Why does this matter to me?

_____

_____

Why does this matter to me?

_____

PART 10 · DURING THE CONVERSATION

One thing Jennifer says employers notice quickly:

_____

_____

One resume mistake to avoid:

_____

_____

One way to make experience more credible:

_____

_____

One thing young candidates often underestimate:

_____

_____

One piece of advice I want to use:

_____

_____

PART 11 · APPLY THE FEEDBACK

Choose one section of your resume or professional profile.

BEFORE

_____

_____

WHAT NEEDED TO CHANGE

_____

_____

AFTER

_____

_____

Why is the revised version stronger?

_____

_____

PART 12 · MY STORY BANK

Create a bank of stories you can later use for resumes, interviews, networking and applications.

WEEK 9 REFLECTION

BEFORE THIS WEEK...

I thought a strong resume was mostly about:

_____

_____

NOW...

I understand a strong resume needs:

_____

_____

The strongest evidence I found about myself:

_____

The experience I was underestimating:

_____

The skill I can now prove better:

_____

The resume change I am most confident about:

_____

The professional story I want to keep developing:

_____

FUTURE READY™ PASSPORT EVIDENCE

Save:

ONE EXPERIENCE-TO-SKILL STATEMENT

_____

ONE RESUME-READY BULLET

_____

ONE STORY FROM ATHLETICS, SCHOOL, WORK OR LIFE

_____

ONE REVISED PROFESSIONAL STATEMENT

_____

ONE PIECE OF JENNIFER'S FEEDBACK

_____

ONE CHANGE I MADE

_____

CAPSTONE CONNECTION

Keep:

- your strongest resume-ready statement
- one story that proves a human skill
- one story that shows problem solving
- one experience you originally underestimated
- one professional who helped sharpen your thinking
- one piece of feedback that changed your professional materials
- one example of how you can now explain your value more clearly

Your resume is not your entire story.

It is evidence that gives someone a reason to ask you for more of the story.

WEEK 9 CLOSE

I USED TO SAY...

_____

NOW I CAN PROVE...

_____

THE EXPERIENCE I WILL NOT OVERLOOK AGAIN...

_____

THE FEEDBACK I WILL USE...

_____

THE STORY I CAN NOW TELL...

_____

THE NEXT THING I WILL IMPROVE...

_____

DON'T JUST CLAIM THE SKILL. PROVE IT.
